ACADEMY MUSICAL COURSE CON-CERT FEB. 23.

The appearance of a trio of musica stars on the same stage in one evening is an attraction of unusual merit for Norwich but that is what will happen on Friday evening, Feb. 23, if the plans now under consideration by the promoters of the Slater hall musical course are carried out. The three ar-tists are Madame Povla Frisch, dra-matic soprano, M. Jean Verd, pianist, and Roderick White, violinist. Norwich music lovers will remem-er with a great deal of pleasure the ppearance of Madame Povia Frisch In Slater hall two years ago. Since that time she has appeared in nearly all the leading cities of the country and wherever she has sung there have been requests for a return engagement. She is assisted this seasoon by M. Jean Verd, a young French pianist nerican violinist. He comes of a tinguished family. There are three others, all decidedly talented and officient in their distinct branches of Steward Edward White is a ely read novelist, author of "The sed Trail." "The Silent Places" other well known novels of recent deation; Gilbert White is distinguished as a portrait painter and ar-tist, whose recent moral painntings in the Kentucky state capitol and New even court house have won him a coration from the French govern-ent; Roderick White, violinist, no nted than his two older brothess talented than his two older proth-ors, is fast becoming recognized, not only for great brilliancy in his par-ticular artistic field, but for the same conscientious thoroughness of work.

which seems to have characterized the other members of the family.

Born in Michigan, Roderick White received in his early boyhood an education not unlike that of many American boys in public schools and travel. In 1906 he entered the Hotchkiss school in Connecticut. The following summer, however, he began his first serious violin study with Max Bendix, under whose tutelage he remained while further pursuing his academic studies in the Mackensie school and passed, where he continued his violin study under Cesar Thomson until May. Returning to America, he was graduated from school and passed his college entrance maintailons for Princeton. It was at this point that he decided upon a musical career in preference to fund the first Priday in each month, for the dress is easy to faunder, and is easy to make. The right front overlaps the left at the closing. State Secretary Prederick L. Perry Pattern le took away the license of Henry C. Pfleghar, a New Haven man, who was accused of operating an automobile while drunk. Pfleghar's car struck a woman. He admitted that he had "three or fou Jasses of beer," but denied that he was intoxicated.

Beginning in February, the secretary to receive the hearings. It is his idea to hear all New Haven county cases at the court-house in New Haven county cases at the court-house in New Haven county cases at the court-house in Server and the first friday in each month, the Fairfield county cases at the court-house in Bridgeport on the second Friday, and the remainder at Hartford and the first friday to be an open date on which urgent matters may be attended to in any county.

Norwich music lovers are invited to call at Cranston's and subscribe for tickets to Cranston's and subscribe for tickets to the recital. If the number of sub-scribers warrant it, the option will be closed and the appearance of these eminent artists assured.

SAYS STATE CAPITOL

IS LARGE ENOUGH. Comptroller Webster Will Make Changes to Accommodate Some

State Comptroller Morris C. Web-ster does not share the view that the state Comptroller Morris Contests does not share the view that the state capitol will soon be too small for its purpose. He said the other day there was a great deal of unused space in the building which could be utilized. He has successfully solved the problem of providing the state highway department with ample accommodation, and in the west wing of the capitol this important department, which controls the expenditure of millions of dollars of the people's money, is housed in quarters that are commodious and in every way fitted for its work, and easily accessible to the general public.

It is the intention of the comptroller to take hold of the problem with which he is confronted in providing for the state board of education. The rooms which this department occupies in the capitol are located on the third, fourth and fifth floors of the building. The arrangement is inconvenient. On comptroller has a plan by which the state board of education for its regular work will occupy quarters consisting of rooms all on the same floor. His plan includes the construction of a floor in the old senate chamber midway between the present ceiling and the floor. This will give him space for three large rooms to be added to the present quarters of the board on the third floor. When this plan is carried out the board will have four large rooms for the general work of the department and a small room to be occupied by the secretary.

Comptroller Webster said the other day that it was time enough to talk about the erection of a building to be used exclusively by the departments of the state government when it became necessary to have one. In his opinion the state would not need such a building for 25 or perhaps 50 years unless the multiplication of complissions should make the pressure on the space of the capitol so great as to render the erection of the building a necessary, if it ever became necessary to exect a state office building for the necessity. If it ever became necessary to erect a state office building for the departments, there was plenty of land, Mr. Webster said, on the west of the capitol to provide a site without changing the architecture of the pres-

POETRY

THE REFINER'S FIRE.

He sat by a furnace of sevenfold heat
As He watched by the precious ora,
And closer He best with a searching gase
As he heated it more and more. He knew He had ore that could stand the test. And He wanted the mest gold To mould as a orown for the King is

As it melted and passed away.

Yet our gold shone out with a richer As it mirrored a Form above That bent o'er the fire, tho' una

Ah! no, but He saw thro' the present so he walted there with a watching With a love that is strong and surAnd his gold did not suffer a with —Author Unknown.

One morning ah! so early, my beloved my beloved. One morning and so carry, my beloved.

All the birds were singing blithely, as is never they would cease;

"Twas a thrush sang in my gurden "Hear the story, bear the story and the lark sang, "Give us glory" and the dove said, "Give us peace." Then I harkened ah! so early, my beloved, my beloved,
To that murmur from the woodland of the dove, my dear, the dove:
While the nightingale came after.
"Give us fame to sweeten duty"
When the wren sang, "Give us beauty!"
She made answer, "Give us love."

Lweet is spring, and sweet the morning, my beloved; Now for us doth spring, doth morning, wait upon the year's increase.

And my prayer goes up "Oh, give us, crowned in youth with marriage glory,
Give for all our life's dear story.

Give us love, and give us peace"

—Jean ingelow.
